FEATURED MINOR OF THE MONTH:

Food Studies

Dr. Allison Ewing-Cooper is the advisor for the new Food Studies minor. Allison explains that food is at the heart of all we do. Food Studies examines food in all its dimensions, including culture, economy, health, policy, and the environment. This minor pairs great with a Communication major because it provides students with the opportunity to use their communication skills to contribute to food justice, environmental sustainability, and cultural and entrepreneurial activity around food. You could also double major in Communication and Food Studies.

Did you know, Tucson is the only city in the United States to be a designated UNESCO City of Gastronomy? That makes the University of Arizona the perfect place to study this unique and diverse discipline.

Classes you could take for this minor include:
- FOOD 101: Intro to Critical Food Studies
- FOOD 102: Intro to Food Systems
- FOOD 300: Food Justice, Ethics, and Activism
- GEOG 350: The Geography of Beer and Beverages
- NSC 315: Sports Nutrition

To declare this minor, email Allison Ewing-Cooper (arewing@email.arizona.edu) or your Communication advisor today!
